THE HORSE. By WILLIAM YOUNG. With a Treatise on Dragoon. Revised and Enlarged by WALTER WATSON, M. R. C. V. 12 vols. pp. 320. D. Appleton & Co.

In the preparation of this fourth edition of a standard and deservedly popular work, Mr. Watson has made considerable alterations in the old text, especially in the way of revision and rearrangement, the description and treatment of new diseases, and the addition of the results of modern experience and investigation in veterinary science. The remarks on the early history of the horse and the different breeds of horses, the treatise on draught, and some other portions of the work, are nearly unaltered. Mr. Young wrote his work with thoroughly practical views, and the present editor has wisely followed his example. This book as it now stands is probably the best we have on the subject to which it is devoted.

Samuel Keesee, a member of the Society of Friends, has published a short doctrinal catechism under the title of "The Conciliator, being a Serious Inquiry into and a Rational Elucidation of the Means of Salvation." It is printed by James Egbert, and for sale by Kirby, No. 633 Broadway.

The Emerald, a collection of graphic and entertaining Tales, brilliant Poems, and Essays, gleaned chiefly from fugitive literature of the 19th century," (Boston: John L. Sherry), is the first issue of "The Gem Series," edited by Ephraim Sargent, a volume of which is announced to be published every month or two. The selections are made with good taste, and appear to have been culled from out of the way places, so that most of them will be entirely new to the majority of readers. The book is very neatly printed and bound, handy in size, and well adapted for travelers.
